this book makes the extremely complex process of architectural perception far more transparent and thus contributes to a better understanding of our built environment why is there so much debate about the appearance of our built environment about the aesthetics of architecture today why do opinions about the aesthetic quality of buildings often diverge extremely even among experts why can't we agree on architecture on what is beautiful and what is not most areas of construction such as statics and building physics are measurable and can therefore be substantiated with objective arguments yet this does not apply to the unquantifiable aesthetics of architecture accordingly judgments on aesthetics are always subject specific and strongly dependent on the viewer nevertheless the aesthetics of architecture is not just a matter of taste many relationships between buildings as objects and viewers as subjects can be determined objectively with the help of perceptual psychology and information theory as this book demonstrates because of the ease with which we perceive many people see perception as something that just happens however even seemingly simple perceptual experiences involve complex underlying mechanisms which are often hidden from our conscious experience these mechanisms are being investigated by researchers and theorists in fields such as psychology cognitive science neuroscience computer science and philosophy a few examples of the questions posed by these investigations are what do infants perceive how does perception develop what do perceptual disorders reveal about normal functioning how can information from one sense such as hearing be affected by information from another sense such as vision how is the information from all of our senses combined to result in our perception of a coherent environment what are some practical outcomes of basic research in perception these are just a few of the questions this encyclopedia will consider as it presents a comprehensive overview of the field of perception for students researchers and professionals in psychology the cognitive sciences neuroscience and related medical disciplines such as neurology and ophthalmology in this comprehensive treatment of infant perception philip kellman and martha arterberry bring together work at multiple levels to produce a new picture of perception s origins
